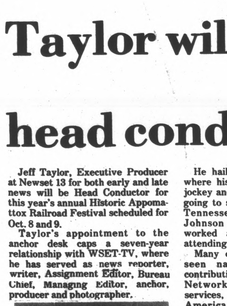
Volume 92 - Number 38 | Deadline: 2 p.m. Monday | Appomattox, (Va.) - Times-Virginian - September 21, 1983 | Phone: 352-8215 | Two Sections - 16 Pages

Taylor will be head conductor



Jeff Taylor

Jeff Taylor, Executive Producer at Newset 13 for both early and late news will be Head Conductor for this year's annual Historic Appomattox Railroad Festival scheduled for Oct. 8 and 9.

Taylor's appointment to the anchor desk caps a seven-year relationship with WSET-TV, where he has served as news reporter, writer, Assignment Editor, Bureau Chief, Managing Editor, anchor, producer and photographer.

He hails from Martinsville, Va. where his career began as a disc jockey and announcer while he was going to school. Jeff went to East Tennessee State University in Johnson City, Tennessee and worked as a broadcaster while attending college.

Many of his stories have been seen nationwide through his contributions to the ABC Television Network in syndicated news services, ABC's Good Morning America, ABC's World News Tonight, and ABC's Nightline.

Outside his professional career, Jeff is involved in acting, movies, photography, swimming and travel.

Several new features have been added to the festival this year. Among them will be a Norfolk-Southern Railroad line diesel locomotive, No. GP38, on display on Saturday, Oct. 8. The railroad is also furnishing a special 22 minute movie titled, "Going Home." The Norfolk-Southern Railway will also have on display a safety car, featuring film strip on railroad crossing safety.

WHILE NO OFFICIAL IMCOME FIGURES were available as of press time, the unofficial word was that last Wednesday's Appomattox Fall Beef Festival was a smash success. The event, sponsored by the Appomattox Lions Club, drew a crowd estimated at in excess of 1,000. The event feature live music as well as U.S. choice beef prepared in a variety of ways. Additional photos of the Fall Beef Festival can be found on page 12 of this week's Times-Virginian. (Photo by Allen Austin)

Smith wins contest

Margaret Smith of Appomattox was declared the winner in close competition in last week's Times-Virginian Football Contest after a coin toss.

Smith and six other contestants tied for top honors, missing only four games in the contest. Smith and Alvin Booker of Gladstone tied, each with a ten point differential in the two tie-breakers.

Smith will receive a check for $20 as first prize for her winning effort and Booker will receive a check for $10 as second-place winner.

The contest continues this week, with full details on rules and prizes on an inside page of this issue of the paper.

Lions meet

The Appomattox Lions Club will meet tomorrow (Thursday) evening at 6:45 at the Country Fare Restaurant.

All members are urged to make plans to attend.

High school band members plan activities this week

A tip of the hat, a crash of the cymbals, and the Raider Marching Band swings into action!

The week of Sept. 19 through Sept. 25 has been designated as Band Week. There will be band students in the Triangle Plaza Monday through Thursday from 5 to 6 p.m. to try to answer any questions about the band. Each day there will also be a different featured instrument to be demonstrated. The public is invited to enjoy these activities.

Finally, on Saturday the 24th, the entire band will be featured in two mini-concerts. There will be a display of all band instruments, schedules of performances will be given out, and painters' hats will be sold for only $2.00.

The band has several events scheduled this year for your enjoyment and have put in long hard practices during the summer and after school.

Included in these activities are five half-time performances at the football games in Appomattox, of which two have already been performed. Featured in these performances are three soloists, Tracey Trent on clarinet, Jeff Jaggars on baritone sax, and Timmy Lawson on trumpet.

Also the 1983 band fund-raiser has "trumpetted" to a start. The band members each will be selling fine Gourmet Spices. Also any donations would be accepted gratefully.

Thanks to Mr. Frank Coffey, Vivian Seay, the Band Boosters, and Raider fans, the band is readily "marching" forward to a great year.

Parade deadline noted

The deadline for submitting entries in the Historic Appomattox Railroad Festival Parade has been set for Wed., Sept. 28, 1983.

Many local organizations and individuals received information and entry forms by mail. Please return entry forms as soon as possible to: Historic Appomattox Railroad Festival Parade, P.O. Box 513, Appomattox, Virginia 24522.

If you did not receive an entry form and would like to enter a float, horse, antique car, marching unit, or other entry, please contact parade chairman Debbie Rush at 352-5385 or Dot Davidson at 352-7178.

"We are looking forward to having the most exciting parade we've ever had, and your prompt entries can make this possible," commented Rush.

Town taxes due September 30

The 1983 town taxes for real estate and personal property are due on Sept. 30, 1983.

To aid the citizens of the Town of Appomattox, the Town Office will be open on Saturday, Sept. 24, 1983 from 9 a.m. until 12 noon.

After Sept. 30, a 10 percent penalty will be added to the town taxes.

If you have any questions concerning your tax tickets or if you did not receive yours, please contact the Appomattox Town Office as soon as possible.

Research aids turkey flocks

By BILL SHERROD

The wild turkey is a true North American native. The bird, which today provides great sport for Virginia hunters, was once in contention for the honor of being named the national symbol.

That great statesman of early America, Benjamin Franklin, felt the turkey would be fitting avian symbol for the United States. But, alas, the wild turkey lost out to the majestic bald eagle.

As the United States grew and became a great nation, more and more land was consumed for residential, commercial and agricultural development. The wild turkey began to disappear from much of its original range across the North American continent.

Game management programs initiated in this century have helped the bird come back to much of its native range.

Proof that game management programs have paid off is evident today. The turkey is firmly established across much of the state of Virginia.

And, based on what has been learned through scientific research since the inception of game management programs, biologists believe now that habitat management used hand-in-hand with game management, is an important tool in the preservation and expansion of the state's bird and animal populations.

Westvaco, a wood products company with its Virginia Timberlands Division headquartered in Appomattox County, made the decision to study the impact of modern forestry practices on turkey populations following acquisition of a 12,000-acre tract of land in Buckingham County in the late 1970s.

Joe Collins, manager of Westvaco's Timberlands Division, notes that Westvaco considered the large block of land – actually comprised of two 6,000-acre tracts – an ideal area to study the impact of forestry practices on the environment, including game and non-game animals.

"First, we monitored the streams to check for erosion problems," Collins says. "Then we got involved with VPI to see what happened to game and non-game species."

In March of 1981, Westvaco participated in a turkey symposium

Greetings from Martha Street as unseasonable weather continues. No frost on the agenda. Of the last seven mornings, dew on the car windshield only two. No doubt about cooler weather being around the corner, but we're not sure which corner. And a seasonable sign is the pumpkins available in food stores. Apples ready.

Salute to Pamplin. Given the Virginia Municipal League achievement award for innovative and successful local government projects, The award presented Sept. 20 at a Municipal League conference and awards banquet at Williamsburg. Had to do with a fire in March 1982, destroying a vital payroll plant. The town overcame the threat to its economy.

My alma mater, University of Richmond, has lost thirteen straight football games. But there is a bright side. Due to special gifts from the family, foundations and friends, a million dollar Chair in History is being established to be known as The Douglas Southall Freeman Chair. Dr. Freeman was editor of the Richmond News Leader for 34 years and a Pulitzer prize winner for his volumes on Lee and Washington. He was the principal speaker here at the McLean House Dedication in 1952. His mother was born in Appomattox County.

Drove to the parking area at our National Park Service Sunday and , as usual, found it to be an interesting spot. Counted 37 cars: Nebraska, Texas, Georgia, Mississippi, Maryland and Virginia, etc. The Texas car was from Fort Worth. One car had two ladies from England.

One to go! The Rev. David A. Garrette, Appomattox, Route 1, has a hobby of trying to have one Coca Cola bottle from each of the fifty states. And he has 49 of 'em. Lacks one from Idaho. He also has in his collection Coke bottles from Israel and Germany.

Many close football games over the weekend. Such as Slippery Rock 29, Millersville College 27.

Virginia highway deaths are slightly higher than at this time last year. 579 to 574. That is enough.

DENNIS TORRENCE IS SHOWN WITH A slow-moving-vehicle sign. Torrence notes that moving farm equipment on public roads should be a prime safety concern for farm workers in Appomattox County and elsewhere. This is National Farm Safety Week, and an indepth look at farm safety may be found on pages 6 and 7 of this week's Times-Virginian. (Photo by Allen Austin)
